02 / BUILD SOMETHING USEFUL FOR YOUR BUSINESS

One business need. One useful destination.

Turn one focused idea into a page or tool customers can actually use, built with the AI you already work with. Spacefast gives that AI a head start, so a resource hub, campaign page, or product selector can go live without waiting on the website queue.

AT A GLANCE

Who this helps.
Freelancers, agencies, startups, and customer-facing teams who build with an AI agent and make things customers need to see.

What to start with.
A customer resource page, a campaign landing page, or an interactive product selector.

What Spacefast adds.
Hosting, your own domain, a database, private sharing, versions, and comments your AI can act on.

Plan around the project.
Every plan allows commercial use, and Personal is $0 with 20 Spaces. Adding team members needs Pro, free up to 5 members.

CONVERSION PATH

my.spacefast.com/start

Where to send traffic. Send your audience to my.spacefast.com/start, where they can let their agent set it up, set it up themselves, or connect a Git repository.

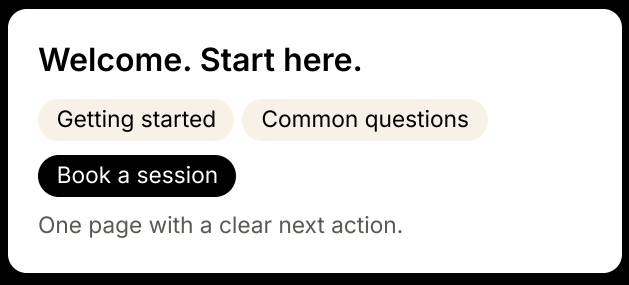

Who converts. The business owner, marketer, or agency publishing the project sets up the account. Clients and customers who only review or comment do not need paid seats.

What to know. Spacefast fits teams that already build with an AI agent. No account is needed to try a publish, and claiming the Space with a free account keeps it online.

EXAMPLE PROJECT

A customer resource hub

A small service business could bring its getting-started guide, approved FAQs, and booking link into one page.

Illustrative content concept, not a built-in template or a tested customer result.

THREE PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Start with the job your audience needs done.

01 Answer recurring customer questions
Build a resource hub with approved FAQs, links to guides, and an existing booking destination. Keep it informational; booking happens through the linked service.

02 Give a campaign its own destination
Build a page explaining one offer, who it is for, and where to act. Put it on your own domain, revise the copy at the same live address, and link to an existing signup or checkout flow.

03 Help visitors narrow their choices
Build a product selector from supplied product facts and explicit matching rules. Start with logic that runs in the visitor's browser and does not collect their details.

OPTIONAL STARTING PROMPT: CUSTOMER RESOURCE HUB

“Using only the approved FAQs, guide URLs, and booking URL I supply, build a single HTML customer resource page. Group the information into getting started, common questions, and next steps. Make it readable on a phone. Link to the existing booking service. Do not invent offers, prices, testimonials, or policies. Leave out sections for which I have not supplied content.”

Bring the source material.
Approved copy, brand assets, working links, and a clear audience make the example specific.

Check the finished experience.
Review accuracy and mobile readability, and try every link and rule before customers see it.

Example projects to create with an AI tool. Outcomes such as more leads or fewer support requests need measurement.

Private beta at launch: built-in app sign-in, transactional email, and shared team knowledge, including Team Skills and your team's playbooks, past decisions, and brand context. These are not part of the launch for everyone yet.

Core talking points

Use the AI you already pay for.

Your existing AI handles the building and revisions. You pay Spacefast to publish and run the work.

Choose the audience.

Spaces start private. Invite specific people, use a share link or password, or make a customer-facing page public. Reviewers and commenters are free.

Work through feedback together.

Clients and teammates discuss changes right on the page, then ask the connected agent to make the updates, whichever AI each person uses.

Use your own domain.

Connecting a domain is free and managed HTTPS is included. Register through Spacefast at cost. Personal allows 20 outside domains, Go 100, and Pro 500; domains registered through Spacefast do not count.

On brand the first time.

Spacefast tells the AI agent to apply your organization's design system, from colors and type to layout and voice (private beta at launch).

Get work ready for review.

Publish a working version, keep the same link through revisions, and launch on your own domain when it is approved. Restore an earlier retained version if a change needs reversing.

Keep each client's work separate.

Control access to each Space, so clients review their own project without seeing the rest of your work. Keep managing it, or move the Space to the client's team at handoff once the client accepts.

Add functionality deliberately.

Every Space has a database and forms with spam checks. Saving submissions still means building and testing it.

WRITTEN COMPARISONS AND ROUNDUPS

Match the service to the job

Use a resource hub or landing page to compare what a small business needs: commercial use, custom domains, access controls, updates, plan limits, and whether it works with the AI the business already pays for. Let the task define the comparison.

REVIEWS AND EXPLAINERS

Which business idea makes a good first project?

Build one of the three concepts on free Personal with fictional business content. Explain the source material and functionality each one needs.

VIDEO AND STREAMING

Make the customer's next step visible

Show a sample hub built with fictional business content: publish it, choose who can open it, turn on comments, take one, and have the agent update one FAQ at the same link.

Naming and brand usage

Write Spacefast as one word with a capital S, and call each published project a Space. Use the official logos from the Spacefast brand guidelines and never use the Star symbol on its own. Spacefast bills separately from the AI people already pay for, to publish and run their work.
